PERSONAL AND SOCIETY.

Bits of Society Gossip. There is quite a stir among the young people of one of the North-side sets, and it has all culminated just in the time of the dull social season, and consequently there is a great deal of talking being done. For more than a year, and in some cases for three or four years, some six or eight couples have been paired, so that any one outside of that number knew that when there was any entertainment to be given, at least so many young ladies were provided with escorts, and as many young men had made the selection as to whom they would accompany. It was a settled fact, and while there were no positive engagements-matrimonially-party engazements were always sure. But now things have taken a most decided change, and the previous quiet is now as opposite an norest. One young lady went on a visit to a northern city, and on her return her pretty hand was graced by a ring. Of course this made talk, and very much annoyed her best young man here. She says it means nothing, but the ring is there and likely to stay, so it seems. Another member of the sets visits a city in another direction. A ring is not the result, but frequent and long visits to her from a young man of that city testify to the fact that some one won a beart during her absence. One young man's affectious have been rudely trampled upon by so ambitious mamma, who wishes her darling daughter to win more of this world's goods in the match which she will make than the aforesaid young man is said to have. She protests that there is still the same feeling which she has always had for him, and yet she accepts attentions from the moneyed young man, which plmost drives the poor lover to despair. Two young men are said to have received "hooks" instead of "syes" to their proposals, and swear they will quit society altogether. Due young man has been the devoted slave of ones are greatly agitated concerning it. Campers-out are a queer lot, and yet not so In a sense by which they could be distinguished by many another "queer lot." For one thing, they are always sure that their especial party knew just the place-about the only glace-and the superlative place in every respect. They next know, that just as many as they had in their party, no more, no less, were just right as to number. They know just exactly what to take, and other campers out who take any extra or leave anything at home that they have, is plus or minus what is correct, compared to their perfection. If they camp near a stream or lake, one who does not, misses the acme of bliss, or if they go to the woods remote from a body of water, that is the place, for there is not the danger of drowning or other perils peculiar to the deep. It is certainly a great pleasure to them to be able to be so satisfied with their outing. but the trouble comes when they begin to compare their pleasure with some one who believes they had the ideal recreation.

"Little dinners" at Newport are a fashionable form entertainment, and the following description is given of the table decoration of two little dinners which were given there this season, by way of giving them a bit of originality: The Louis Lorillards had eight people around a board that was covered with a cloth of grass-green velvet, on which were strewed wreaths of Alpine poppies. That sounds rather curious, but in reality it looked perfectly charming. Then Mrs. Schuyler Hamilton gave a dinner at which the table was spread with a white satin cloth, and in the center was a large sack of the same material tied with a silver cord, and out of it were tumbling masses of snowwhite and very pale pink sweet-pea blossoms. Those pink peas were the only touch of color in the decorations; everything else was snow-white. Thursday was the sixth birthday anniversary of little Lilian Atkins, yourgest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Atkins, and she celebrated the event by giving a party to her young friends at the family resi-dence on North Mississippi street. The little hostess was assisted in entertaining her guests by her sister Florence and brother Willie. Games were the diversion all the afternoon, and when the refreshments were served bonbons containing paper caps were given to each, and soon each head was decorated with them in all shapes and colors. A large number of pretty presents were received from admiring friends. The company included Juliette and George Brown, Georgie and Neva Pee, Lizzie and Lucy Hardy, John Bryan, Jessie Cleaveland, Hattie Eitel, Edith Bingham, Winifred Lewis, Scott Runnels, Willie and Charles Jacobs, Clara Hawkins, Ada Born, Nona Reagan and Belle Remey.

Like her sister, Mrs. Hannah Whitail Smith, she was a born leader, and was one of the most accept-able and influential ministers in the Friends' Society. Miss Carey Thomas, dean of Bryn Mawr College, is her daughter.

Miss Frances E. Willard has always made it a point of being perfectly frank about her age. As she would not permit in herself the foible of being sensitive concerning it, and she wished to set a good example in this regard to other women. Knowing this her friends have been much amused to see the paragraph going the rounds that "she is just completing her fiftieth year," and they authorize the statement that she was forty-eight on her last birthday.

THE LADIES' TAILOR.

He Discourses on High Art in Woman's Dress and the Mysteries of the Wardrobe. New York World. "It is a good deal more trouble to fit a lady than you would imagine," said a fashionable office and motioned to his servant to bring a sepulchral resting place. His bed-room ladies' tailor, as he sat in his elegantly furnished chair for his visitor, "because, you see, ladies was the loft over the undertak-are very peculiar. I have been in this busi- ing establishment of E. N. Allen, at ress for years, and have had dealings with every kind of lady in this country and in Europe. flow are ladies measured! Well, first take off their outer eaving their neck and arms bare. Then the fitter measures them from the collar to the waist in the back, the width of the back is taken at its widest and narrowest parts, the front from the base of the throat to the waist, next from the under arm to the waist, and then the size of the throat is taken. After that we take the measurement of the bust, waist and hips. That done, the inside length of the sleeve is taken, and the pircumference of the biceps. The measure of the skirt is next taken, up, down and around. Then we have three fittings-first in the rough, second with more perfect linings and lastly when everything is completed."

Who does the fitting?" "Men and women. Some ladies will be fitted by none but men. They don't seem to like women about them. Some don't like the idea of wearing so few clothes and allow men to handle them. Fitting is a rather embarrassing thing at times, let me tell you. Then women's vanity keeps a great many from allowing men to fit them, especially where the figure is not well rounded. Most of the ladies wear skin-tight web undergarments, which show all the outlines and yet are not immodest. Good fitters practically command their own prices. They work only during the seasons, which are very short here, and they make $4.000 to $5,000 a | had known Bob from boyhood, and being year. They are born fitters, just as men are born poets and orators."

'How do you 'make up a poor figurel' That's an art. For instance, a lady will come who is as thin as a rail, with no bust, no arms, no shoulders. We have to use cotton wadding to supply her deficiencies. That's where a good fitter comes in. A bungler would make her look lumpy, but an artist in his line turns her out a model. Then suppose a big fleshy lady comes along. She has an immense expanse of breast. Of pourse that must be broken. We usually break the bodice into four lines by a rever of the same ploth. Your eye can only travel from one line ... Mrs. Henry Keller. of Muncia was the guest of pooks is visrelatives here on Sunday... Miss Lide Brooks is visof them the mind forgets to notice the expanse. A COFFIN FOR A BED.

The Queer Resting Piace of a Man Whose Life Was Blighted by His Betrothed's Death. Philadelphia Record. Robert W. Deal, who had gained local and national renown by nightly making his bed in a coffin for the last twenty years, will soon be laid in his peculiar couch for the long last sleep. The poor fellow died last night. "Bob," as he was familiarly known, resided in Frankfort, where his eccentric ways and odd little figure were familiar to every resident of the place. He was a sufferer from asthma, and on that account sought his repose in the

No. 10 East Sellers street, Frankford, and the coffin-bed lay in the center of the room. Bob was a beneficiary upon the undertaker's charity.

and had for years done odd jobs around the place for his board. He had occupied this coffin every night since he came to Mr. Allen, except when his asthma was so bad that he was compelled to sit up during the night He was a quaint little man, about fifty-three years old, with piercing black eyes, and curling black hair that was fast turning gray. He came of one of Frankford's first families. His father was once the leading Democratic politician of the town, and an extensive builder. He built all the original buildings at Frankford Arsenal more than half a century ago. He gave all his children, Robert included, a liberal education, and brought them up in luxury. The undertaker's shop used to be his father's stable, and the loft he made his bed in was in his boyhood his A romance of love twined around the life of this little man, with his stooped shoulders and peculiar ways. His lady-love died many years ago, and Bob often repeated some of the sonnets of which she was so fond. It was thought that poor Bob never fully recovered from the blow caused by her death, and the walls of the work-shop of the undertaker have numerous acrostics and poems of Bob's composition written upon them. He was a mathematician of some pretensions and a fine penman. Mr. Allen familiar with his sad history indulged him in all his whims. Bob complained the last few days of feeling unusually bad, and he died in undertaker Allen's office last evening. A visitor to Mr. Allen's shop one night some weeks ago found that gentleman seated in his office. "Come with me." said he, taking up a lantern and leading the way up-stairs, "and will show you Bob; he is in his bed now." Following Mr. Allen up the steps leading to the loft, the light exposed to the visitor long rows of coffins ranged around the room. One of extra large size lay upon the floor, and from with-in it came deep labored wheezing. The lid was and the lid began to slide slowly downward with a creaking sound. A head poked up, and then a man sat upright. It was Bob. He answered: "Yes, what do you want?" and then, seeing a visitor, sank back and again drew the lid over him. "Bob's got it a little bad to-night," said Mr. Allen, alluding to his asthma, and he pulled down the trap leading to the loft and left Bob to enjoy his sleep till morning.

liance Assembly had found it necessary to give fresh impetus to the unflagging interest which has been exhibited by the numerous audiences which have thronged the Tabernacle from the inception of the proceedings their selection of Hop. Will Cumback could not have been more apropos or judicious, nor could the subject upon which the honorable gentleman dwelt have been more appropriate or acceptable to his hearers. The addresses which have been delivered hitherto have been marked so largely by a richness of thought and solidity of character that the people were thoroughly prepared to induige in a treat such as they participated in this morning. The honorable lecturer's topic alone was a sufficiently novel and attractive one to fill the Tabernacle, and to say that the audience was delighted and carried away by the speaker would fail to express the approbation and popularity with which the address was received, while the upanimous and unalloyed expressions of pleasure expressed must have been extremely gratifying to Mr. Cumback. We would not attempt further to describe the lecture and its mirth-provoking witticisms, the practical criticisms of existing follies of married life, the duties of platformspeakers as educators, the depiction of ludicrous home scenes, so true to life, the amusing aspect of woman's exaltation and man's self-abasement presented in the Colonel's eloquent, sparkling and pungent style peculiar to himself, but would congratulate Long Beach and the Alli-
